The 2020 Art from Luna Beberide has the name "La recuperada" on the label, which is the name of the vineyard (the recovered one), the one with the highest altitude in the Finca de Valdetruchas, more or less at about 750 meters in elevation, on calcareous clay. The wine matured in 5,000-liter oak vats and 500-liter oak barrels for 12 months. It's young and brooding, with black berries and wild herbs, a touch of spice and abundant, fine-grained tannins, more elegant than those from the Finca. It's medium ripe with 13.5% alcohol and very good freshness, something I have seen improving in the Luna Beberide wines in the last few years. 12,500 bottles were filled in November 2021.
